Objectives:

To outline the range of genomic research activities currently aimed at discovering information relevant to the address of health and health care disparities;

To identify salient ethical concerns relevant to underlying assumptions and applications of this research;

To suggest ways forward in the face of such concerns, including greater involvement of communities in setting the research agenda.