Dr. Keri will be presenting her work on discovering mechanisms of therapeutic response in breast cancer with the goal of identifying novel therapeutic combinations for overcoming resistance. Their studies use cell biology approaches, genomics, and various animal models to discern key pathways that mediate drug response. They are particularly interested in improving the efficacy of mTOR inhibitors as well as evaluating the effectiveness of epigenetic targeting agents in triple negative breast cancer.